

Committed to Continuous Improvement

Sustainability for California Almonds is interconnected and crosses all aspects of the almond lifecycle, inside the orchard and beyond. In addition to growing a healthy food that is good for people, California Almond farmers are working to continuously improve their practices in a way that's good for communities and the planet.

A Solid Foundation

Underlying the advancement and innovation in each of the categories above is nearly $70 million in Almond Board of California-funded research spanning more than 40 years. This has built a foundation for continuous improvement that is helping almonds to be an economically, environmentally and socially responsible crop for California.
